

How to Stream Media

1

Getting started

1. Pre-heat the oven for pizza, pre-order food, or prepare your favorite snacks as needed.
2. Put on appropriate clothing and personal protective equipment (PPE), including sweatpants, t-shirts, and blankets.
3. Select a media or streaming device for use. This could include:
  - Smart TV
  - Laptop/PC
  - Gaming console
  - Phone

Tip: Various methods, such as an extended high definition multimedia interface (HDMI) cable or screen share function between compatible devices, can allow you to broadcast media from a smaller player to a larger screen on a TV or projector for everyone to enjoy.

Logging in

1. Select a streaming service for browsing shows and movies.
2. Obtain the service account password by calling your almost-best friend to ask their uncle's second cousin for their login information.

Tip: This awkward call can be avoided by participating in a free trial period that most streaming services offer, or by paying relatively low subscription fees for a personal account.

3. Log in to the service, bypass the overcrowded watch list, and select a new show or film you previously had no intention of watching.

Warning: Failure to select a show or movie quickly, or acknowledge the preferences of friends and family members may result in adverse effects, including damage to hearing or other bodily harm.

Let the show begin!

1. Continue to listen for the doorbell or smell for anything burning as these are signs that the food prepared in Part 1 is ready to retrieve and eat.
2. Press the play button to begin watching.

Tip: To avoid prolonged sequences of binge-watching, predetermine an allotted number of episodes or hours to watch and set an alarm to stop, or configure profiles on your media device to lock out after a specified number of hours.
